Invitation

On behalf of the Programmes Group, we would like to invite you to ACI 2014.

This year sees a number of exciting highlights:

- The live cases will continue to be spread over 2 days rather than 1 and we are very grateful to Dan Blackman and his colleagues in Leeds for hosting these.
- You will see from the programme that we are focusing on some of the more difficult aspects of PCI – cardiogenic shock, cardiac arrest, total occlusions and complications. With the introduction of public reporting, we have also dedicated a session discussing the impact this may have on our practice.
- We are fortunate that Matthew Syed, author of the award-winning book ‘Bounce’, has agreed to come along. Matthew was a three times Commonwealth table tennis champion and now sports writer for The Times, and will be talking on the science of success.
- We have retained the Oracle Session, Trial Updates and the Young Investigator Award, which this year will be chaired by Rod Stables.
- We have moved back to three Wednesday evening symposia which, between them, should appeal to all attendees. These will be aimed at Allied Health Professionals, Trainees and Cath-Lab based Research.
- Friday sees a very exciting session where we hope to have a full mock-up of a cath lab to run simulations and put some Consultants through their paces!. This will be followed by a session discussing life threatening complications, which was very popular at last year’s meeting, and the programme will end earlier on Friday to allow timely travel.

We hope you will find the meeting enjoyable, entertaining and informative.

My thanks go to the Programmes Group, Fiona and her team at Millbrook and the Stock Answer. We are ever grateful to our colleagues in industry who provide such magnificent support of this educational programme. We could not do this without the British Cardiovascular Industry Association.
