An Invitation to Glasgow from the Local Organizing Committee Co-Chairs

It is with great pleasure that we invite our friends and colleagues to Glasgow for the 34th Congress of the Société Internationale d'Urologie.

Glasgow is a truly charming city, with historical architecture and a welcoming spirit. Its proximity to Europe's major transportation hubs places it within easy reach of your flight or train.

This means that you will quickly and easily come to the meeting, for which Dr. Inderbir Gill, along with co-chair Dr. Margit Fisch and their Scientific Committee, have planned a timely and challenging scientific programme that is unafraid of asking provocative questions and debating the answers.

There is no doubt in our minds that this will be a fruitful and worthwhile educational experience for all who attend.

In true SIU tradition, attendees will also benefit from a social programme highlighting the very best of this unique city, that boasts a rich tradition of medical and surgical innovations including the discovery of antiseptics in surgery (Joseph Lister), obstetric ultrasound (Ian Donald/Tom Brown), and the founding of the second-oldest urology unit within the UK (Arthur Jacob). We heartily encourage you to extend your stay and take some time to enjoy the many attractions and activities on offer.

Please check www.siucongress.org regularly, or follow SIU on Facebook and Twitter for updates. Also feel free to visit the SIU-UK National Section website: www.siuuk.co.uk

We look forward to welcoming old friends and new colleagues.

An Invitation to Glasgow from the SIU President

Luc Valiquette

Dear Friends,

I warmly invite you to join us this October as we head to Glasgow for the 34th Congress of the Société Internationale d'Urologie. We are thrilled to be in Glasgow in 2014, as we follow in the noble footsteps of the Commonwealth Games, the Ryder Cup, and at least another half-dozen mega-events.

I visited Glasgow for the first time about eighteen months ago with our Congress Office team, the kind people from the Glasgow City Marketing Bureau, and a briefcase full of preconceived notions. No sooner had I consumed my welcome tea and shortbread, that the powerful attraction began. With every venue that we visited, every restaurant where we dined, every urologist colleague we met, and every Glaswegian who crossed our path, I became irresistibly drawn to the warmth, the charm, and the natural hospitality that are the hallmarks of this beautiful city and its inhabitants.

With our colleague Indy Gill on board as Scientific Chair this year, we have designed for you a professional programme that builds on the strengths of past meetings and looks to improve the education that you extract from attending. The innovations that Dr. Gill and colleagues are bringing to the programme will allow you to hear some good science, interact with international key opinion leaders in urology, and take home truly useful education.

You will notice that, based on your suggestion, we have shortened the Congress by one day. By condensing the programme we are allowing you to spend less time away from your practice, and to optimize the learning time you spend at the Congress.

I warmly invite you to join us in Glasgow for a leaner, more streamlined Congress that lists to your needs, yet remains the same SIU that welcomes old friends and new members equally. See you in October!

Luc Valiquette

An Invitation to Glasgow from the Scientific Programme Chair

Inderbir S. Gill

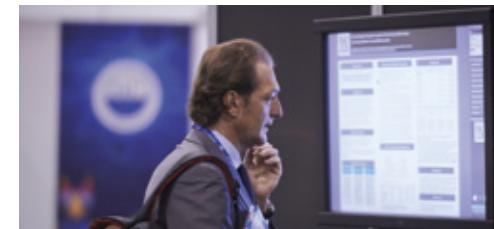

I heartily invite all my colleagues from around the world to join the SIU in Glasgow in 2014 for a unique and challenging educational programme. Thanks to the invaluable expertise of the SIU 2014 Scientific Programme Committee we have been able to construct a programme that tackles a wide range of important and timely urological issues. Led by world-class speakers, these sessions have been designed to address the most salient educational needs expressed to us by SIU attendees.

In addition to the SIU programme, delegates will also benefit from a full day of national society and subspecialty symposia on Sunday, October 12 as well a series of weeklong early-morning instructional courses. SIU 2014 will also host the SIU-ICUD Consultation on Stone Disease, led by Prof. Jean de la Rosette and Dr. John Denstedt.

Of course, attendees must also plan to take time to enjoy their surroundings, and our local colleagues Shiv Bhanot, Mike Hehir, Mark Speakman and Hing Leung have done their utmost to plan a fun social programme that will foster the sense of collegiality and cooperation that is valued so greatly by the SIU. The friendly atmosphere in which one can network with colleagues is one of the most important aspects of these face-to-face Congresses.

So, in sum, world-class science, friendly people, a shorter meeting, and a central destination: I hope you will join us in Glasgow!

Reasons to Visit

GLASGOW

If your image of Glasgow is filled with anachronisms of rusting shipyards and deep-fried confectionery, think again. This year is the ideal time to rediscover Scotland's largest city as it welcomes the world during the biggest year in its modern history.

The world's leading publications and travel guides have consistently ranked Glasgow as a must-visit destination in recent years, but 2014 will be a year unlike any other. Ultra-prestigious events such as the Commonwealth Games, Ryder Cup, Homecoming Scotland, the MTV European Music Awards and of course the SIU Congress will all converge toward Glasgow.

The noisy clamour of the Barras Weekend Market

A weekend highlight – the Barras (the Barrows) is a rowdy flea market that covers a huge area in the central east of the city. Buy anything from a couch to a hat to a shirt to a vintage brooch.

Whisky making

Create your very own whisky blend at Scotland's beautiful distillery, Glengoyne. Or, try the Whisky and Chocolate Matching workshop. (www.glengoyne.com)

Glasgow's funny

The funniest people you'll ever meet are the ones who don't know how funny they are. Glasgow is home to Europe's premier comedy festival, Glasgow International Comedy Festival, and numerous famous comedians like Kevin Bridges, Frankie Boyle, Billy Connolly, and Limmy.

Glasgow will introduce you to a whole new vocabulary

The Glaswegian accent may be divisive – and you have to tune your ear to it – but there's no disputing that Glasgow has given far more to the Scottish language than Edinburgh. Try mucker, eijit, polis, and daftie, to name just a few.

Get a good dose of Glaswegian hospitality

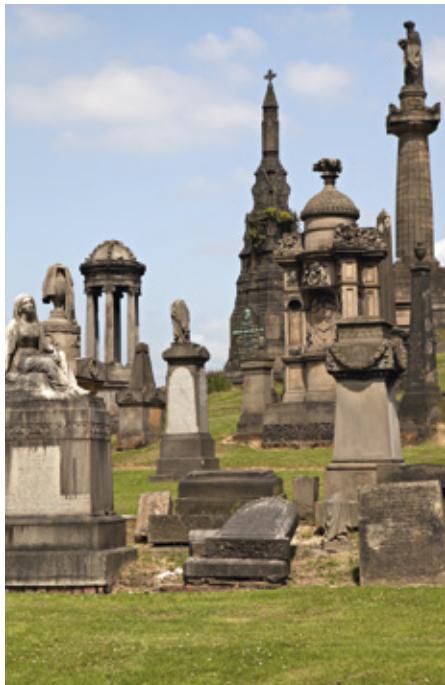

Friendly Glaswegians

Glaswegians are known for their "gift of the gab" and are friendly and gregarious in nature – with the city brand, PEOPLE MAKE GLASGOW, reflecting that character. Wander the streets of Glasgow and you are sure to not only see the sights, but also get a good dose of Glaswegian hospitality.

Diversity of style

Glasgow is the UK's largest shopping destination outside London's West End. With over 1,500 shops, from cool vintage shops to independent boutiques to exclusive designers, the city is a style maven's mecca.

Macabre excursions

The Glasgow Necropolis is a Victorian cemetery home to 50,000 departed souls; a sprawling and beautiful city of the dead in which monuments and tombs vie for space, crowding the hill and meandering to its summit to meet the statue of John Knox that overlooks the site. The Necropolis was based on Père Lachaise in Paris, and the atmosphere is similarly dreamy.

An authentic Scottish experience

Folk music, whisky and a warm welcome may be an almighty Scottish cliché, but that doesn't make them any less appealing, and Glasgow boasts some of the best places to partake of all three. The Ben Nevis and the Park Bar on Argyle Street are particular favourites, with the former serving 180 different variations of the water of life and the latter hosting a monthly Gaelic pub quiz, and both famed as being among the friendliest in a city full of friendly pubs.
